

61.6

written by

Daniel Jenkins

Address
Phone 385-335-0327
E-mail thecybergrape@gmail.com

INT. RADIO STATION - NIGHT

Pitch black. Everything is quiet, only some mild wind blowing past the building outside for a moment, and the pitter patter of a light drizzle beginning to form, before a loud METALLIC CREAK pierces the air, and light is let in through a newly opened heavy duty garage door. IVY MERCER, a 25 year old woman holding a phone in one hand and wearing a small backpack tentatively takes a step into the cavernous space.

The rain is intensifying into a stronger downpour as Ivy continues, exploring the unearthed facility and pointing her camera at every panel

IVY

And we're in folks, I told you I'd find it. And with time to spare too

Ivy speaks into and looks at the phone to monitor the CHAT of her livestream, but only has 7 viewers.

CHAT

(on screen)

•Click here for a free phone! ->

She gives a wry grimace, but continues onward, looking past the phone. Its now a heavy storm outside and Ivy closes the metal door behind her, with another metallic screech to go with it. Now, too dark to see, she turns on the phone flash light and continues to the next hall while narrating to her audience

INT. HALLWAY - CONTINUOUS

IVY

Welcome to the home of Euclidean
Rock Radio, FM 61.6! You may remember the name from the news,
the infamous events that took place
here are still talked about in true crime circles to this day.

A CRACK of lighting lights the dilapidated hall for a second. Broken glass, rubble concrete, it's a pitiful sight. The walls have remnants of song lyrics that were painted on a long time ago, but it's mostly peeling off. Ivy tenses slightly, but her voice continues unaffected.

IVY (CONT'D)

When such a grizzly event occurs, its common for rumors and theories to emerge. Our way of coping with such tragedy? Perhaps.

(MORE)

IVY (CONT'D)

Or maybe theres more too it, an unnatural force lending its energy to help us understand. Legend has it, if you come here at midnight, and tune the radio to station 666, you can hear the voices of hell. Millions of poor souls trapped in eternal suffering, desperate to be heard..

A small DING comes from her phone, she looks down to see a message, complete with a little firework animation "New Milestone! : 50 viewers" She smiles and gets back to the content, while more chat messages come in.

CHAT

- Is this the station up on the hill? I heard its dangerous
- I love urban exploration!
- What's going on?

Ivy rounds the corner, and enters a large space. Theres a large center console, filled with dials, switches and lots of dust.

INT. CONTROL ROOM - CONTINUOUS

IVY

The heart of the beast. Were in the brains of the building everyone, this is where the magic happened.

She takes her time moving through the space, running her hands on the old rusty machinery and deteriorating chairs, pointing her phone across all of it to really immerse her growing audience in the space. She's far enough in, that the storm outside is more comforting ambience than a distraction.

At the other end of the room on the wall, is a series of different levers and switches, one labeled "Emergency Power". Ivy walks over, and keeps the show going.

IVY (CONT'D)

Fifty-One. Thats how many people went missing that fateful November night. Normally, a radio station this size would never have employed so many people, but they were in the middle of a corporate cluster, 2 frequencies under one roof.

Another lightning strike, the flash spills in through the doorways.

IVY (CONT'D)

No trace of them was ever found. No bodies, no blood, not even a note. Nobody made or received a phone call. Everything seemed normal, until the broadcast went dead at 6pm exactly.

Ivy reaches the substantial switch, and pulls it down with a satisfying THUNK. A few seconds later, some of the overhead lights flicker on, restoring at least some auxiliary power to the station.

Across the room, a heavy, rack-mounted machine with two oversized wheels—a 1990s REEL-TO-REEL LOGGING RECORDER—groans to life. Its small VU meters glow a faint, dusty amber. The wheels spin backwards for a second, rewinding automatically, before stopping with a loud mechanical CLACK.

Ivy blinks, tracking the sound, and pans her phone camera over to the machine. The digital counter on the deck reads: 17:58:40. November 14, 1994.

IVY (CONT'D)

Oh wow. Guys, look at this. This is an FCC logger. It recorded everything broadcasted that night. The police allegedly released transcripts, but the actual tape was lost in evidence.

She approaches the console. One button on the deck is caked in grime but labeled: PLAY. She hesitates, then hits it.

The reels spin. From the console speakers, thick analog static fills the room, followed by the crisp sound of a 90s rock track playing.

IVY (CONT'D)

(whispering to her phone)

Two minutes before the blackout.

Through the speakers, the song abruptly cuts out. A heavy, rhythmic METALLIC THUD echoes on the tape—like a garage door slamming shut.

ON-AIR DJ (V.O.)

(Through speakers, confused)

The hell was that? Troy? Is the back bay door acting up again?

In the background of the tape, distant, overlapping voices from the office hallways begin to rise. Not shouting in pain, but murmuring in mass confusion. Dozens of people.

ON-AIR DJ (V.O.) (CONT'D)

Uh, folks, having some technical difficulties here in the studio, gonna throw it to a commercial break—

The DJ's voice cuts off as he drops his headset. The open studio mic catches the sound of his footsteps running to the studio door. He opens it.

The hallway noise floods the tape. It's a cacophony of 50 people all gasping, whispering, and suddenly moving in unison. A massive, low-frequency hum—like a vacuum tearing open—vibrates through the speakers.

Then, a sudden, collective inhalation from every single person in the building. A unified gasp.

The digital counter hits 18:00:00.

Absolute, dead silence. The track audio on the tape continues to spin, but it's completely blank. Dead air.

Ivy stares at the spinning reels, completely unnerved.

CHAT

- what happened to them?
- I remember this, it was talked about for weeks
- knew someone from school who was related to one of the missing employees, haven't talked with them in ages
- probably a mutual suicide, like some of those old cults

Ivy makes her way to the center console and checks the chat log, along with the viewer count. She's now at 120.

IVY

A full profile was made on every person who disappeared. Psychological state, personal history, anything the detectives could gather. If this was planned, there was no evidence.

Ivy sits down at the center chair, and sets up her phone to face her while she pulls off her backpack. From it she pulls a small portable FM radio and shows it to her audience which is continually growing. Her phone reads 11:58

IVY (CONT'D)

And here we are! In just a minute we will tune this radio, and see if the legend holds any weight. What do you guys think is going to happen?

CHAT

- nothing
- nothing
- you might pick up a trucker?
- wait don't you need a permit to be in there ?
- static

The stream is gaining traction, the view count keeps growing. 198... 199... 201.

Its now midnight.

IVY

Perfect timing, welcome everyone to the stream! It just hit 12, and were about to see for certain what happens when we tune this radio to FM 666,. Are you guys ready?

The Chat is rolling quicker now, more difficult to read but a few repeat messages do stand out

CHAT

- YES!
- so ready
- i'm covering my eyes!

Ivy turns the radio on, and begins to slowly turn the dial, passing a few stations as she tunes it to her desired station. The view count goes up, and the dial clicks. Songs morph together, news and weather interrupt, until she finally reaches 666.

Static. No discernable signal. For half a minute, nothing happens.

CHAT (CONT'D)

- nothing,.
- anti climatic
- can i open my eyes?

IVY

It may seem like nothing, but if we listen a little closer..

Ivy covertly grabs a small FM transmitter from her backpack hooked up to an mp3 player.

On it, are multiple audio files labeled creepy_ambience001.mp3, whispers-08.mp3, ghostly_voice.wav, etc. The transmitter is set to 666, as she selects one of the mp3s and plays it.

Still static. Ivy starts and stops it a few times, but the radio is still producing nothing. She turns it a couple times in her hands

IVY (CONT'D)
(under her breath)
Whats the matter with you..

Ivy raises the volume all the way up, tries to smack it a couple times, and readjusts the tuning, but nothing works.
Even going back to previous stations has nothing. Theres no signal here at all.

Ivy looks around in a mild panic, but quickly recomposes her self as she stares at the banner on the wall with the original station number. She turns back to her phone.

IVY (CONT'D)
Now, of course i expected it to not work. Did no one ever stop and think that the real evil number to turn to, would be the one that was actually used?

Ivy tunes the radio once again, but dials it into 61.6.

The moment the dial lands on the proper station, it explodes with noise. Ivy screams and drops it on the table as she gets up and stumbles backward in fright. From the small radio, emits an endless stream of suffering. Wailing, crying, screaming from a trillion tortured souls, all much louder than such a small box could actually provide.

Ivy is covering her ears, and waits a beat. She walks over to turn the radio off, but the switch isn't working. The volume dial similarly has no effect, while the tuning dial she can't turn at all. It's stuck in place. She goes to open the battery compartment, when the noise suddenly stops.

Ivy hesitates for a minute with the now silent box, until a voice appears. It's unintelligible, but clearly speech. The radio distortion, and deep voice speak in a forceful but slow dialect. Whatever language it is, it's not of the world.

The voice goes uninterrupted for 30 seconds, before ending abruptly. Once its ended, the radio goes back to static like before, and Ivy can now turn it off.

She drops the radio on the floor and just stands in shock for a minute, Eyes wide.

Beat.

She recomposes her self and breaths, then turns to her phone setup. Chat is going nuts.

CHAT

- OH MY GOD
- what was that??
- fake
- It was speaking directly to me!
- yea, i heard my name, ..
- wait did it speak to all of us?

IVY

Well everyone, someone clearly started broadcasting on 61.6 some creepy audio.. Wait, could you guys understand that? It sounded like gibberish to me..

CHAT

- yes
- ya
- it was rly clr 2 me
- i understood

Ivy stares at the chat log, many 'yes's confirm a wide scale understanding. She furrows her brow, and notices the view count is approaching 500.

IVY

Ok.. what did it say?

Chat slows a bit, but a few messages do come in with a similar pattern.

CHAT

- it told me i was responsible for my brothers death..
- to me it was just berating me over and over
- the voice tried to make me feel guilty
- i got a date for my death? Like 4 years from now, what does that mean? Do i believe it?
- i think you're dying in 4 years, man
- to me, it said something about 'going through the red door'
- same here, i should go through a red door, but there's no red doors in my house
- yea, me too. Red door
- 'go through the red door', also it hates me :(

IVY
(whispering to herself)
Red door, ..

Ivy then notices that it's quiet.. the storm has stopped. The entire station is silent, except for her heavy breathing.

IVY (CONT'D)
Um, thank you all for attending the stream, it's late and uh ill be back on tomorrow afternoon and..

CHAT

- booo!
- you cant stop!
- look for a red door
- don't end it yet!
- were too invested now, keep going

Ivy quickly gathers the radio and transmitter, and puts them in her pack. With everything in hand, she stands and heads for the exit, when her phone dings again. She checks the notification and it reads "New Milestone: 750 viewers". She eyes it for a beat, but continues onward.

IVY
I don't know how the police never found that recording, but it's potentially new evidence, assuming it's not planted as a prank. Super elaborate if you ask me..

INT. HALLWAY - CONTINUOUS

Ivy walks through the control room to the hallway she came from, walking toward the garage. The hall is now well lit, and outside is too dark to see, the windows are pitch black. The view count continues to grow. Ivy walks for a long time while the lights are flickering overhead.

Almost a full minute of walking. Ivy slows down and comes to a stop, then stares intensely down the rest of the hallway. She turns and looks back the way she just came, the control room entrance is around 50 feet behind her, not a minute of walking distance.

IVY
I was more tired than i thought, this hall seems bigger now haha

She begins walking again, intently placing each step.

CHAT

- this is a long hallway,.
- old buildings are like that, they're intentionally designed as optical illusions.
- what station needs this much space?

Ivy keeps walking. And keeps walking. Her breathing is becoming quicker, and she picks up speed. Faster and faster, until she's sprinting. Ivy runs and begins to lightly cry, the hallway isn't getting any shorter. The light flickering becomes more intense, leaving us in darkness for longer periods of time. In the shadows from the wall, what appears to be a human arm appears out of nowhere, and knocks Ivy down onto the floor, breaking her sprint.

On the ground, Ivy quickly turns to see whatever knocked her over, the lights flicker back on and a protruding hanging sign is swinging back and forth as if someone had just run into it. Ivy wipes some tears from her face, and reads the sign. "<- Loading Dock".

She looks to her left, and sees the doorway to the exit garage. She quickly gets up, picks up her phone and walks toward the exit.

INT. GARAGE - CONTINUOUS

Back in the loading bay, Ivy sees the large metal door she came in from and starts heading towards it. Once she's closer, a flickering light on an adjacent wall catches her attention. The light is illuminating a simple wooden doorway beneath it, like you'd find in a bedroom. The door is colored a deep crimson. If it was there before, she didn't notice it.

Ivy stares at the new doorway, unable to move. She manages to take a single step toward the exit, when her phone dings again. "congratulations! You've hit 1,000 concurrent viewers".

CHAT

- It's the door!
- I can feel it through the screen, you need to go to the door
- What if all those people are trapped?? You should see if you can free them!
- everyone who wants to see her go through the door put a thumbs up

The chatlog is filled with a stream of thumbs up emojis, and the view count continues to rise. Ivy looks around nervously and controls her breathing, then addresses the stream.

IVY
So, do you want to see behind the door?

Chat accelerates.

CHAT
• YES!
• Absolutely
• yesyesyesyesyes
• i'm so excited, yes!

She maintains a shaky smile, and heads for the door. The frame is several inches off the ground, and is cutting off a sign.

IVY
The contractors certainly didn't pay much mind to the surrounding wall ha-ha.

Ivy speaks hesitantly, her forced laugh causing her to clear her throat.

CHAT
• haha
• true lol
• xD funny!

Ivy glances back at the exit, but turns back to the red door and gives a deep breath. She reaches for the handle and turns it slowly. The door swings open effortlessly, but gives a CREAK as a dark wooden staircase leading down is revealed. View count 1500.

INT. BASEMENT - CONTINUOUS

Chat explodes with intrigue. Ivy carefully moves to the first step, which groans and settles under her weight. The 2nd step does the same, all the way down.

At the bottom, Ivy shines her light all around, she's in an impossibly large space. Her light cannot reach any wall, just a concrete floor and ceiling that continue into infinite darkness. View count 2000. Her phone gives a warning "Low Battery"

IVY
(to self)
What the,.

Ivy takes a step back toward the stair case, when her hearing goes out.

She doubles over in pain and hangs her jaw open while her hands move up to grip her head. A slight ringing, and her ears pop, it slowly returns to normal. She looks back up the staircase, and the door is now gone.

Ivy runs up the stair case frantically, at the top is just a concrete wall. She pounds on it with her hands and yells.

IVY (CONT'D)
HELP!! Someone please! LET ME OUT!

It's solid, and slightly moist. Ivy glances back down to her phone. 3000 viewers. She quickly goes to her phone and dials 911.

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
911, what's your emergency?

IVY
Hello! I'm Ivy Mercer, uh I'm trapped and need help. Please come to the abandoned radio station at the top of the hill as soon as you can!

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
The old Euclidean station? I'll send a team right away. Where are you exactly?

IVY
Thank you! And near the garage entrance, there's a red door to the side! I walked in, and now its gone.

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
Ok, what are you doing there?

IVY
I'm a streamer, uh this was an urban exploration of a old creepy building is all, please let me--

Ivy gets interrupted, and the 911 operator gets colder.

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
You stupid girl.

IVY
..I'm sorry?

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
I hate that I have to waste my breath on you. Here's what you're going to do, you are going to go back down those stairs and walk.

IVY
(quietly)
How do you know about the..
How long do i walk for?

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
Until you can't anymore.

Dial tone. They hang up, and leave Ivy in a state of shock.
She tries dialing again.

911 DISPATCH (O.S.) (CONT'D)
911, what's your emergency?

IVY
Um, hello? I think our call might've been cut off last time and--

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
The old Euclidean station? I'll send a team right away. Where are you exactly?

IVY
Huh? Hold on, that's not what I said, please listen I--

911 DISPATCH (O.S.)
Ok, what are you doing there?

Same voice. Same cadence. Ivy's lip trembles but she doesn't say anything.

911 DISPATCH (O.S.) (CONT'D)
You stupid girl. I hate that I have to waste my breath on you. Here's what you're going to do, you are going to--

Ivy hangs up the phone. She re-opens the stream. 5000 viewers.

Ivy walks back down the stairs, and ventures into the darkness. Each step hesitant and slow, she moves forward.

She walks for sometime. Visibly sweating, Ivy takes off her jacket, and just leaves it behind as she keeps going. She holds her hand to her nose to block it and grimaces aswell.

Ivy's boot steps forward, and sinks. The sharp CLACK of concrete is replaced by a wet, sickening SQUELCH. She trains her phone flashlight down. The floor is gone. She is standing on a landscape of raw, pulsing flesh. She stops and lets out a gentle sob as she glares at the nothingness in front of her. Her phone DINGS.

1,000,000 viewers and counting. It's continually spinning up in a blur. Chat is going insane, but they all say the same thing.

CHAT

- keep going
- keep going
- keep going
- keep going

Over and over. Ivy fully breaks down crying at the sight. The radio in her bag erupts in noise. Ivy pulls it out and can barely make it out.

RADIO (V.O.)

--you don't know the agony--
 --we were cursed to be forever
 without a body--

Ivy screams and throws the radio. She falls backward into the flesh in a disgusting squishy slap. The radio lands in the darkness, and SPLASHES into a liquid. Ivy lifts her phone and points it forward. View count 10,000,000. The livestream view is static for a beat. Then the facial detection square locks onto a seemingly empty area in the void. Ivy looks up from the phone but cant make anything out. Another square, another face detected. Then another. 20 pop up at once, the phone gives a warning "Too many subjects"

Out of the abyss, emerges a demonic silhouette cloaked in shadow, then everything goes dark. A dead battery icon flashes on the screen, and her light fades.

In total darkness, squishy footsteps approach Ivy, and she's spoken too directly.

LEGION

Give us yours.